

Trade Opens Doors for the U.S.

With reduced barriers to trade, UPS offers U.S. companies both small and large the tools to take their products and services global.

In other words, free trade agreements mean more opportunities for the U.S. economy.

What Free Trade Agreements Mean to UPS

- Modernized and expedited customs procedures
- Level competitive playing field, especially with state postal operators
- Ability to control its operations in foreign countries

Helping U.S.-Based Companies Stay Competitive

UPS's logistics and lending services empower businesses of all sizes to export their goods and services virtually anywhere in the world. Free trade agreements increase market opportunities and grow U.S. competitiveness.

Free Trade Has a Proven Track Record

UPS's export volume has increased by an average 19 percent to countries with which the U.S. has recently brokered free trade agreements.

Trade Equals More Jobs at Home

With every 40 U.S. import or export packages added to its system, UPS adds one new job with full benefits to its U.S. workforce.

UPS supports pending Free Trade Agreements with Peru, Colombia, Panama, and Korea.

UPS moves goods, information, and funds to more than 200 countries and territories worldwide.

Each day, UPS transports 15 million packages worldwide and moves approximately 6 percent of the U.S. GDP.

For more information about UPS's international operations, visit pressroom.ups.com.

July 2007